Embrace your culture: fast-track your career: Improve work efficiency of your multicultural staff

Most of us try to fit in, we aspire for a simple happy life without too many hurdles. In the attempt to fit in to the new country we immigrated in to or the new job we acquired, we all let go of our unique point of difference. We do not want stand up and represent our whole self. We rather feel comfortable showing only some parts of our identity. The aim is not to face criticism or judgment. For some of us it is a cultural norm. We even are willing to let go of our sense of identity and sacrifice our right to flourish in full bloom.

Learn and get inspired from the story and real-life example of this Indian girl from a middle-class family on how she became a circuit breaker and defined the “new normal” for her community by embracing her culture and fast tracking her career.

Audience will be walk away with:

- Practical tools to get rid of the limiting beliefs – that hold us back
- Cured “tall poppy syndrome”
- Learning to value & respect your culture and still – how not to let them define you
- Ability to defy the societal norms and write your own rule book
- Bucket loads of resilience
